ession of the Document Begun in the Senate.

[Comments on the Message.]

LONDON, August 24.—The president's message was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the few men present in the house to-day. It was purely political. Representative Randall, a democratic member of the committee on foreign affairs, which will deal with the message and the Will to give effect to the president's views, said: "I think it a very able exposition of our rights under the treaty, and the president's very cogent reasons for enforcing the act investing the president with power to retaliate against importers and exporters is unfortunate that the senate refused it could not agree to the amendments and propose amendments which might have been submitted to the government of Great Britain, and settled by negotiation the controversy between the two countries."

Senator Payson, of Illinois, said: "Without fully committing myself I think the president has sufficient power for executing the existing law to express his views and not only the opinion of our rights, but for the equitable adjustment of the trouble. It is more politics than there is in the message."

Senator Crisp, of Georgia, said: "The message is the proper thing under the circumstances. The president gives his own opinion on the construction of the treaty, accepts the decision of the senate as final as to the fisheries question, and at the same time reports to the congress and asks congress to adopt retaliatory measures. The president will accept the message as the duty to protect the American citizens."

Senator Adams, of Illinois, said: "If he needs the power he shall have it as far as my vote is concerned. I am doubtful about the power."

Senator Bayne, of Pennsylvania, said: "It is a remarkable document. In my opinion the president sent a treaty to the senate which confessedly contained our rights. After its rejection he sends a message insisting upon the power to carry out views contained in the very treaty which he has refused to ratify. This legislation to warrant it could not agree to the treaty and propose amendments which might have been submitted to the government of Great Britain, and settled by negotiation the controversies between the two countries. The president's message, although it contains a great deal of political buncombe, is a very able document, and I am glad to see it. I think it a very able exposition of our rights under the treaty, and the president's very cogent reasons for enforcing the act investing the president with power to retaliate against importers and exporters is unfortunate that the senate refused it could not agree to the treaty and propose amendments which might have been submitted to the government of Great Britain, and settled by negotiation the controversies between the two countries."

For the committee.

JOHN CAMPBELL,
Chairman.
J. W. D. STOCKTON,
Secretary.

The republicans of Dakota stand on the record of the party, instead of the Chicago platform. They declare in favor of a revision of the tariff.

The Saint Louis Globe-Democrat says: A Harrison and Morton flag waves in Colorado at an elevation of a thousand feet above the surface of the earth, which is just that much nearer heaven than any man can hope to get who relies on voting the democratic ticket in contempt of the scriptures and the plain obligations of [illegible]

"A Voter," in a letter published in another column, asked the question why the judicial convention is called at the time of the state convention. We do not know that there is any ulterior reason for this. The county committee simply followed the precedent of other county committees, in having the same delegation that represents the county at the state convention also represent the county at the judicial convention. It has also been the precedent to have this convention in the same place as the state convention. But we entirely agree with "Voter" regarding the bad policy of mixing the judiciary with politics. The nominations in our state conventions are usually secured by barter. The man that has the most votes in the convention that he can trade is the strongest candidate. It is unfortunate to have the nomination for district judge an element in this battle. The position is not political and neither the nomination nor the election should be from purely political reasons. It is very difficult to have a pure judiciary where nominations are made from purely political reasons. Fortunately though the district has a republican majority the political nomination made six years ago by the republican party was not endorsed by the people. It would be a good idea for the coming county convention to nominate a different set of delegates to the district convention, with the recommendation that that convention decide not to go in the district."

Senator Edmunds has declined to speak during the present campaign. He says the reason he does not speak is not from any embarrassment connected either with our cause or our candidates. It is surprising to find that the democrats succeeded in finding any candidate whom Mr. Edmunds could support without embarrassment. What makes it all the more surprising is that he is connected with both in congress. Senator Edmunds has great contempt for mugwumps who sometimes bolt the party ticket from conscience. But he himself, most always bolts a part of the ticket from personal [illegible] He would be a very good man from a party standpoint, if he suffered less from embarrassments.

Looking at President Cleveland's message from a party standpoint it is an able document. But it will not be regarded as one of the great state papers of his administration. One of the misfortunes of our presidential election is that politics enters too much into every subject in the presidential year. The tariff question has been considered in the senate quite largely with the view of making party capital. The question has not been considered on its own merits. The same can be said about the president's message. It has not been written from a sense of right or wrong, but simply to put his party right in this campaign. All legislation which is supposed to be for the good of the whole country is looked upon from a purely partisan standpoint. They are all trying to make capital out of legislative and administrative acts. The worst of it is that these tricks seem to succeed with the average voter and that it pays to be insincere and unpatriotic. Some time the people will get tired of this sort of thing.

Blaine made rather a bad break in his guarded endorsement of trusts. The statement that they are common in England is denied authoritatively from the office of the most celebrated statistician in England. As to the power of the state to regulate these trusts, there ought to be no question. Mr. Blaine says that it is a private affair. If it is a private affair, when a man beats his wife or kills another man in his own house, but the good of the state demands that this kind of conduct should be punished. It is never advisable for the law to interfere in fixing rates for any products, for competition will usually fix a fair price. But the trouble with these trusts is that they do not allow competition. They absolutely extinguish it and the only safeguard is for the state to interfere and break them up, and thus make competition possible. It is not interfering with the laws of trade, but simply an interference to allow the laws of trade to operate. A trust that by artificial means taxes every person in this country a cent a pound on sugar is nothing more than organized robbery and the state has just as much right to take it by the throat and tell it to stop as it has to seize a footpad.

A Voter's Protest.

To the Editor of the Gazette.

DEAR SIR—If I understand the published call for the El Paso county convention to convene in this city September 1st, it is to select delegates to go to form a sort of duplex service, first to go to Denver nominally to represent this county in a state convention on September 4th, to be held in Denver and also to represent this county in a district judicial convention to be also held in Denver subsequent to the state convention. Now, there are two things about this call that strike the outside voter as a little singular. First, that the same gentlemen who are to represent this county in the state convention are to represent the county in the Fourth judicial district convention. Second, that the Fourth judicial district convention is to meet in Denver instead of in the district. Is it true that there is no room inside of the district to hold a judicial convention? It is certainly a little extraordinary, to say the least of it, and if I mistake not many of the voters of the district will see in this scheme the indicia of trade in someone's interest. It is well known that six years ago in a similar convention the most glaring trades were made to get the name of an El Paso county man on the state ticket and the result was that such names were put on the ticket for governor and district judge that the people had the sense to repudiate and came very near defeating the entire state ticket. Then, under a similar management and for a like purpose, two years ago, one man was permitted to name the entire delegation from this county to the state convention for the acknowledged purpose of trade, and the result was the head of the ticket was defeated. You will greatly oblige many interested voters if you will explain through your columns why this judicial convention is to be so managed.

Yours for the people. A VOTER.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

SOMETHING OF THE LIFE AND WORK OF JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

The Son of a Great Novelist Critic, Essayist, Interviewer, Story Writer and [illegible] Paris Rating the Works of the Poets.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The name of Hawthorne has a magic in it to cultivated literary ears on both sides of the Atlantic. But it is a vision of the elder, Nathaniel, with his shy, melancholy face, that presents itself at sound of the name, be whom the world means when it simply says "Hawthorne," he of the sword pen and gentle yet gloomy soul.

Julian Hawthorne, whose name greets us from the pages of magazines, from the covers of monthly paper covered books on the news stands, and more frequently still from the columns of newspapers, is the only son of the great satirist Hawthorne. In person he does not in the least resemble the shy, delicate man who was his father, being big and burly of frame, with a stride like a grenadier.

Neither does he produce similar literary work, though showing a pronounced taste for the mystic, the psychological, even the occult. There are stories afloat to [illegible] about queer things happening in his private life. One I [illegible] is to the effect that his wife on going up stairs one day passed him on the landing. Entering his study almost in the [illegible] she saw him sitting there, and [illegible] he had neither gone up nor down stairs within the hour. I cannot vouch on oath on this story. I give it as I heard it. In fact I did not hear it. I read it; and I need not repeat the caution not to believe everything one sees in print without due and careful reflection.

But as these are the days when everybody is telling creepy things, perhaps the story will have its place for many, particularly as the [illegible] Hawthorne puts creepy things into his romances.

I have heard persons express surprise when they found this writer's name on the cover of a detective story whose very title savored of crime, police court and prisons. To the inexperienced in the dim and dubious land of the quill this might be a matter of astonishment. Not so to him who is familiar with the hard, thorny and impecunious road of the literary Jordan. Alas! he knows that the writer to whom literature is a crutch, lacking dependence, the privilege of exercising his taste, or even sustaining the dignity of his name by refusing [illegible] below it upon works of, his choice, is not life. Indeed, however high his aspirations, the awful pressure of necessity brought daily to bear upon him will at last not only reduce him to taking the most pitiful orders of literary drudgery, but will even make him revel in it with gratitude. Remember this, all you who yearn and long to throw comfort to the dogs and earn your living by your pen. They who succeed best in it are so situated that they use it as a walking stick, not as a crutch.

Julian Hawthorne was graduated from the scientific school of Harvard. He is said not to have been very studious, and was not considered a particularly good scholar. He made it all up, however, in being first class in all athletic sports, on which he occasionally writes some charming articles. He rowed in the Harvard regatta of 1868. Not until 1872 did he begin to write stories and sketches. He has traveled abroad extensively.

In talking about Julian Hawthorne, let it be remembered that he had a mother as well as a father. Julian himself, writing of his parents, says: "The most fortunate event of Nathaniel Hawthorne's life was, probably, his marriage with Sophia Peabody. To attempt to explain and describe his career without taking this event into consideration would be like trying to imagine a sun without heat or a day without a sun."

Let it not be forgotten either, that there is a Mrs. Julian Hawthorne. She is described as "pretty, petite and vivacity dressed."

As a result of knowing Mr. Hawthorne makes very interesting reading. Ten years or more ago I was employed on a daily newspaper of New York in the capacity of a book reviewer. Every Sunday, to fill [illegible] or three columns about other writers and what they had written, not sparing the rod on occasion. It was said that he got a very good stable salary for this work, one which brought him the "easy mind" which all writers pray for and few ever possess. But, alas and alack! one day presumably he received the document with which most writers are regaled once, if not many times, during their lifetime, containing the disgusting, abject arrogant assertion that his services were no longer required; at least he disappeared from the columns of that newspaper and the literary gossipers who know everything, said that he had offended by writing for some other paper; that in that office no other gods were permitted. The paper alone must be worshiped.

On one occasion Hawthorne interviewed James Russell Lowell, when that gentleman says he didn't know that he was being interviewed, and when Mr. Hawthorne did not [illegible] would have only [illegible] just several months' common length articles were written about this [illegible] which Mr. Hawthorne revealed [illegible] dark side of the picture.

Still later he was so unwise as to write an open letter to poets, advising them not to send verses to newspapers. This occurred while he was the literary editor of a New York daily. He said a poem couldn't leave the fire [illegible] to a newspaper that it would receive in a magazine, and he urged the mighty army of young American poets to fire their verse at the magazines. Yes, and he plainly intimated that the literary editors of newspapers would regard it as a favor if Pegasus was no longer brought to a halt in front of their doors.

Now if there is anything that poets will not stand, it is advice. In fact, nobody likes it, and when it is of the gratuitous order it [illegible] from the unwelcomeness of the offering. Accordingly, as was fit and proper, a bed of smoking coals was prepared, over which Mr. Hawthorne was hauled, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox did the frooling, and very neatly did [illegible] Hawthorne's spite plain that the magazines would not look at a poem until the newspapers had first made fame for its writer. Since then he has taken to plain that Mr. Hawthorne could not be kindly disposed toward the editors of the magazines, or he never would have urged the poets to send them their poems.

Poor Julian Hawthorne finds it a little awkward, sometimes to be the son of his father. People are always looking for points of [illegible] resemblance and are apt to be disappointed when they don't find them. Yet a man may be the son of a famous man, be gifted in his own way and yet not be like his father. He is not yet under 40, and in point of quantity has done already much more literary work than his father ever accomplished. His pen is more useful if not a dazzling one, and if he should have the "chance"—that chance which comes to so much—he may [illegible]

A Custom House Scandal.

BUFFALO, August 24.—Deputy marshals of a state caused a sensation in Ogdensburg yesterday by arresting three of the most reputable citizens: John W. Stone, a lawyer; Nathaniel H. Little, jr., the city collector of customs at Ogdensburg, and Wm. J. Comisky, janitor of the custom house. Warrants for their arrest were sworn out before the United States commissioner here by special agents of the treasury department at Washington charging them with stealing 750 pounds of imported opium from the custom house at Ogdensburg. This is the outcome of the arrest of Irwin R. Gardner, which took place at Ogdensburg last winter, when he, and his companion, Benjamin Gardner, were captured with nearly $125,000 worth of opium in their possession. Irwin Gardner was arrested a day or two ago in Chicago in connection with the same case. It was learned that he had been offering opium for sale there, and did not take long for the government officers to discover that it was smuggled, in fact the very identical goods or part of which had been found in his possession and in that of his cousin last winter. This led to sensational developments at once. The opium had been placed in the custom house at Ogdensburg for safe keeping, and now it has been found on the streets of Chicago. Little and Comisky have been brought to Buffalo and lodged in jail to await examination, which is now in progress.

[illegible]—Further examination was postponed and the prisoners remanded.

NEW YORK, August 24.—Money on call easy, closed offered at [illegible] per cent. The stock market to-day was intensely dull except in the first hour. There was some animation in Northern Pacific in the afternoon and it was strong in the face of a falling market. The declines at the opening reached the eighths per cent in the general list. There was some reaction of prices, but the upward movement culminated about 11 o'clock and all the advance was lost. The close was dull and heavy. Governments were dull and steady.

Pueblo vs. Colorado Springs on the base ball grounds this afternoon.

The republican county convention will meet one week from to-day.

The police magistrate fined a man $3 and costs yesterday for drunkenness.

Mr. W. E. McLain received a fine car load of Kansas water melons yesterday.

The Exchange National bank will open for business at 9 o'clock this morning.

A regular meeting of the stockholders of the P. O. S. of A. Building and Loan association will be held this evening.

The game of base ball next Monday afternoon is for charity, but it is not yet clear who will need the most charity the poor or the players.

Mrs. A. R. Chambers, who was well known in this city and who left to her home about two months ago, died in Kansas City yesterday at the residence of her sister.

Mrs. P. F. Noxon, of Denver, will give a free lecture on "Christian Science" to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock at the city hall. The public are cordially invited to attend.

The address by Rev. D. E. Johnson at the court house hall on Monday night, on the political issues of the day, should be well attended. Mr. Johnson is a pleasing and entertaining speaker.

The Denver & Rio Grande railroad will sell excursion tickets to Salt Lake and return for $29.00. The selling dates are Aug. 20th and 27th; good going until August 30th, and returning until September 4th.

Mr. W. E. Holbrook of Monument precinct has filed his official bond as justice of the peace of that precinct. Mr. Holbrook was elected by the county commissioners at their last meeting in place of J. F. Petrie, resigned.

Supreme Reporter B. F. Nelson of the Knights of Honor, who resides in St. Louis, is in the city as a guest of the Alamo. He will accompany the excursion to Pueblo this evening to attend the A. O. U. W. celebration.

Mr. H. B. Quinby took on Thursday eight people to the Peak via the Cascade Toll road. He is prepared to take passengers either from Colorado City, Colorado Springs, Manitou or Cascade. Orders may be left for him at the Colorado City livery.

The members of the El Paso club base ball nine are requested to meet at the club at eight o'clock on Saturday evening (to night). This includes Messrs. Sanford, Lent, Wood, Woodruff, Lunt, McIntyre, Parsons, Waters, Godfrey, Lundstrom, White, and Goeckbracht.

Mr. J. F. Berry, general agent for the J. H. Wallick company, which appears at the opera house next Friday and Saturday evenings in the "Cattle King" and "Bandit King," was in the city yesterday. The company includes 16 people, three trained stage horses and a trick donkey.

A large force of men are at work repairing the flume over the Monument which was demolished by the flood last week. The new flume will be more substantial than the one destroyed. It is expected that it will be completed in about a week, when water will be turned into the city ditches.

Tickets for the base ball game between the two social clubs of the city on Monday next, at the Athletic grounds, may be obtained at Bell's drug store for fifty cents each, good for the grand stand. Every one should buy one or more tickets, even if they cannot go, for the proceeds will be given to the Ladies Aid society for the poor.

A petition will be circulated among our business men requesting the postoffice department to appoint a night clerk at the postoffice in this city. If such a clerk is appointed the city will have the benefit of the night mails, and any letter mailed before midnight will go out during the night. Postmaster Meier thinks that if a general request is made, that the necessity for such an appointment will be recognized by the department.

The members of Badito Lodge No. 34, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and all visiting brothers in the city are notified to meet at the lodge room at 3 o'clock sharp this afternoon to join the excursion to Pueblo. The A. O. U. W. lodges of Pueblo have made arrangements to entertain in a royal manner all members of the order this evening. Addresses will be delivered by Governor Alva Adams, Hon. J. K. Shireman and others of Pueblo. Hon. B. F. Nelson of St. Louis, an officer of the supreme lodge, will also deliver an address on the occasion.

BEST LINE EAST.

The Union Pacific Ry is by all odds the "Best Line East," on account of the fast time that is made and the reasonable hours for leaving Denver. Also the close connection that is made in Union depots with the trunk lines from Kansas City, Council Bluffs, St. Louis, and Chicago, reaching all the principal cities in the east. The U. P. Ry. is also the short line to the Pacific Coast, running two trains daily west and four trains to the east daily. The evening trains from Colorado Springs make close connections in Denver with the Union Pacific Ry.
